PARIS FASHIONS IN HATS

Both Large And Small In Vogue.

IMPORTANCE OF THE CROWN

When trying on the new hats recently in Paris, I came to the conclusion that this is going to be a difficult winter.

Not only do they need wearing, but they need careful putting on. The right angle, the right height, not to mention the fit, are all points to consider.

Small hat or big hat, both are fashionable this year, and have their interest centred on the crown.

Worn over the right brow or square set across the forehead, the small hat is particularly chic. Wide brims are dipped over the right brow and have curious round whorls on the right side of the crown.

Quaint smocked effects are used in crowns made of flat velvet ribbon, only caught at the top.

Felts are as popular as ever—especially the large black ones. New soft felts, which can be crushed into the pocket, come in lovely newly invented Autumn colourings—one of those which will be persistently worn being a certain shade of pink brown.

Banana Brown.

All the soft becoming brown shades will be chic, ranging from an orangey banana to a black-brown which is at once less hard than genuine black, and yet has decided allure as a frame to the face.

Toupe and velour are the rage, becoming in softness, smart in design, with a lustre which appeals to Parisians.

One of the best models in these fabrics is like an Austrian huntman's hat. The crown is folded, the brim turned up on either side, and down back and front, a tailored bow and curly feathers finishes off the front. Pulled well down over the left brow, this model is a huge success in dark grey with black bow and feathers.

Berry Red

A new plush ribbed, like ermine, with large chenille spots dotted about its surface is another peculiarly Russian-looking autumn number. Its veil is a stiff one, standing up round the hat to give height rather than cover the face.

Velvets will once more be used to frame dainty faces, dark holly green being particularly lovely in this material for winter. Red berry dots are sometimes spotted upon its surface. Points over the left brow are cut to accentuate the twists to crowns, which boast coy little bunches of feathers over the ear.

Woolly materials, either knitted or ribbed, have huge wool pom-poms at the top of the crown and little brims which fold over one side of the face.

Smocked Crowns.

Smocked high-pointed crowns made of satin are especially chic when made in black to wear with the dressy, afternoon or dinner gown.

Velvet pansies are used as decoration or worked flat into close-fitting caps with wide circular stand-out veils. Natural pansy colourings are worn in all the rich

Black And Grey Is Smart For Autumn.

LONDON FUR STYLES

IT is extraordinary how fine Chinchilla is coming into its own again. According to the authorities in fur-craft, we shall see a revival of this fashion amongst the exclusive few who are the proud possessors of this rare pelt.

The Peruvian skins, which are the finest in texture and about 10 in. long, have a black and grey silvery flocculence which cannot be copied in any other fur.

It is the closeness of pile added to natural dark colour which ensures value in this. It is one of the few furs which reacts to warmth, and any article of Chinchilla apparel is greatly improved by being left for three hours in a warm room.

Black and grey is smart in the flatter furs, and Paris is showing a new model which has just been brought to London and is so unique in fur that the London furriers are unable to buy more skins to copy it.

The coat is of Indian flat lamb dyed dark grey and black, cut on very waisted lines, with a long fluted hem and huge collar of silver fox of exactly the same black and grey to tone.

Quaint Apparel On The Way

Forecast From Paris.

Paris.

IT looks like we're in for a deluge of petticoats and—for those who heed it—considerable stuffing around the lungs! You may have your fit and then find yourself conforming as you've always done—you wait and see.

All women like to change themselves and really feel like another person, to go off on a mental excursion and play the role of some grand lady of the past. What is probably going to happen is that all those who have never worn petticoats and had padded chests will try them and those who have—many of our mothers and all of our grandmothers—will continue their present-day apparel.

The younger generation will try anything once and it is no fun for us to learn by precept. Trial and error is our theory and we have a quick decisive method of separating the sheep from the goats and finally getting down to exactly what we want.

RICH HUES FOR EVENING

Regal Distinction In New Paris Modes.

LONG, SIMPLE DRESSES

Paris.

Colours as rich as the hues of a painter's palette in fabrics of regal distinction mark the evening clothes launched for September wear.

Brown laces woven with gold threads, cream laces splashed with silver emerald laces, violet mousselines, pansy blue, cyclamen and Nile green crepes fashion the newest gowns. Their lines are as slim as a reed, their décolletés generally simple in effect, while their hems sometimes are touching the floor.

One gown of emerald lace is embroidered in gold thread and worn with a matching three-quarter-length wrap bordered in mink. Another of emerald lace is worn with a cape of the same material.

Crinkled elastic ribbon trims the long slender frocks fashioned by one designer. A pansy blue crepe so deep it is almost purple, has low round décolleté edged with dark pansy blue ribbon applied with large white crepe panicles and a Nile green silk canvas is trimmed in crinkled ribbon of darker green. Midnight blue crepes worked in gold dots, navy taffetas splashed with pale blue blossoms and brown taffetas printed in a beige lace pattern are shown as mid-season evening frocks by another designer. Most of the gowns fashioned of these stiffer fabrics are designed with slender hiplines and voluminous lower skirts.

Chicken Rissoles

1 breakfast cup cold-cooked chicken; ½ gill thick white sauce; 2 level tablespoons minced mushroom; ½ teaspoon cayenne; egg; 1 tablespoon milk; salt. Mince the chicken very finely. Mix it with the mushroom, seasoning and sauce. Cook it for one minute and leave the paste to cool. Roll out the pastry very thinly and cut it into 2 four-inch rounds. Divide the paste into 12 portions and place one on each round of pastry, a little to one side of the centre. Flatten each slightly. Wet the rim of the pastry with the white of egg and fold it over. Mix the remainder of the egg white and yolk together and beat in one tablespoon of milk. Brush the rissoles in hot fat until brown. Drain on paper and serve.

Ham Smothered in Sweet Potatoes
1½ lb. ham; 3 cups sliced sweet potatoes; 2 tablespoons sugar; 1 cup hot water; 1 tablespoon melted butter or margarine. Cut a slice of ham, about 1½ lb., into pieces convenient for serving. Broil lightly on both sides. Arrange in a baking dish so that they cover the bottom. Spread the sweet potatoes over the ham. Sprinkle with sugar. Add hot water and melting butter, cover the dish and bake in a moderate oven until the ham is tender, basting the sweet potatoes occasionally with the liquid. Remove cover to brown on top.

Fruit Sponge Custard

5 sponge cakes; 1 whole egg and 2 white; ½ pint hot milk; 1 dessertspoon sugar; vanilla flavouring; 1 tin raspberries; cream. Beat up the whole egg and mix it with the hot milk. Turn them into a double boiler, add the sugar, and stir the custard until it thickens, then take it off the stove and leave it to cool. Drain the syrup from the fruit, rub the fruit through a sieve, then mix about half a gill of the syrup with the fruit puree. Whisk the egg whites to a stiff froth and add them to the puree, then whisk them together lightly. Split the sponge cakes in half. Dip each half in the custard and arrange them in a dish. Pour in the remainder of the custard and heap the raspberry mixture in the centre. Decorate with cream.

Raspberry Punch

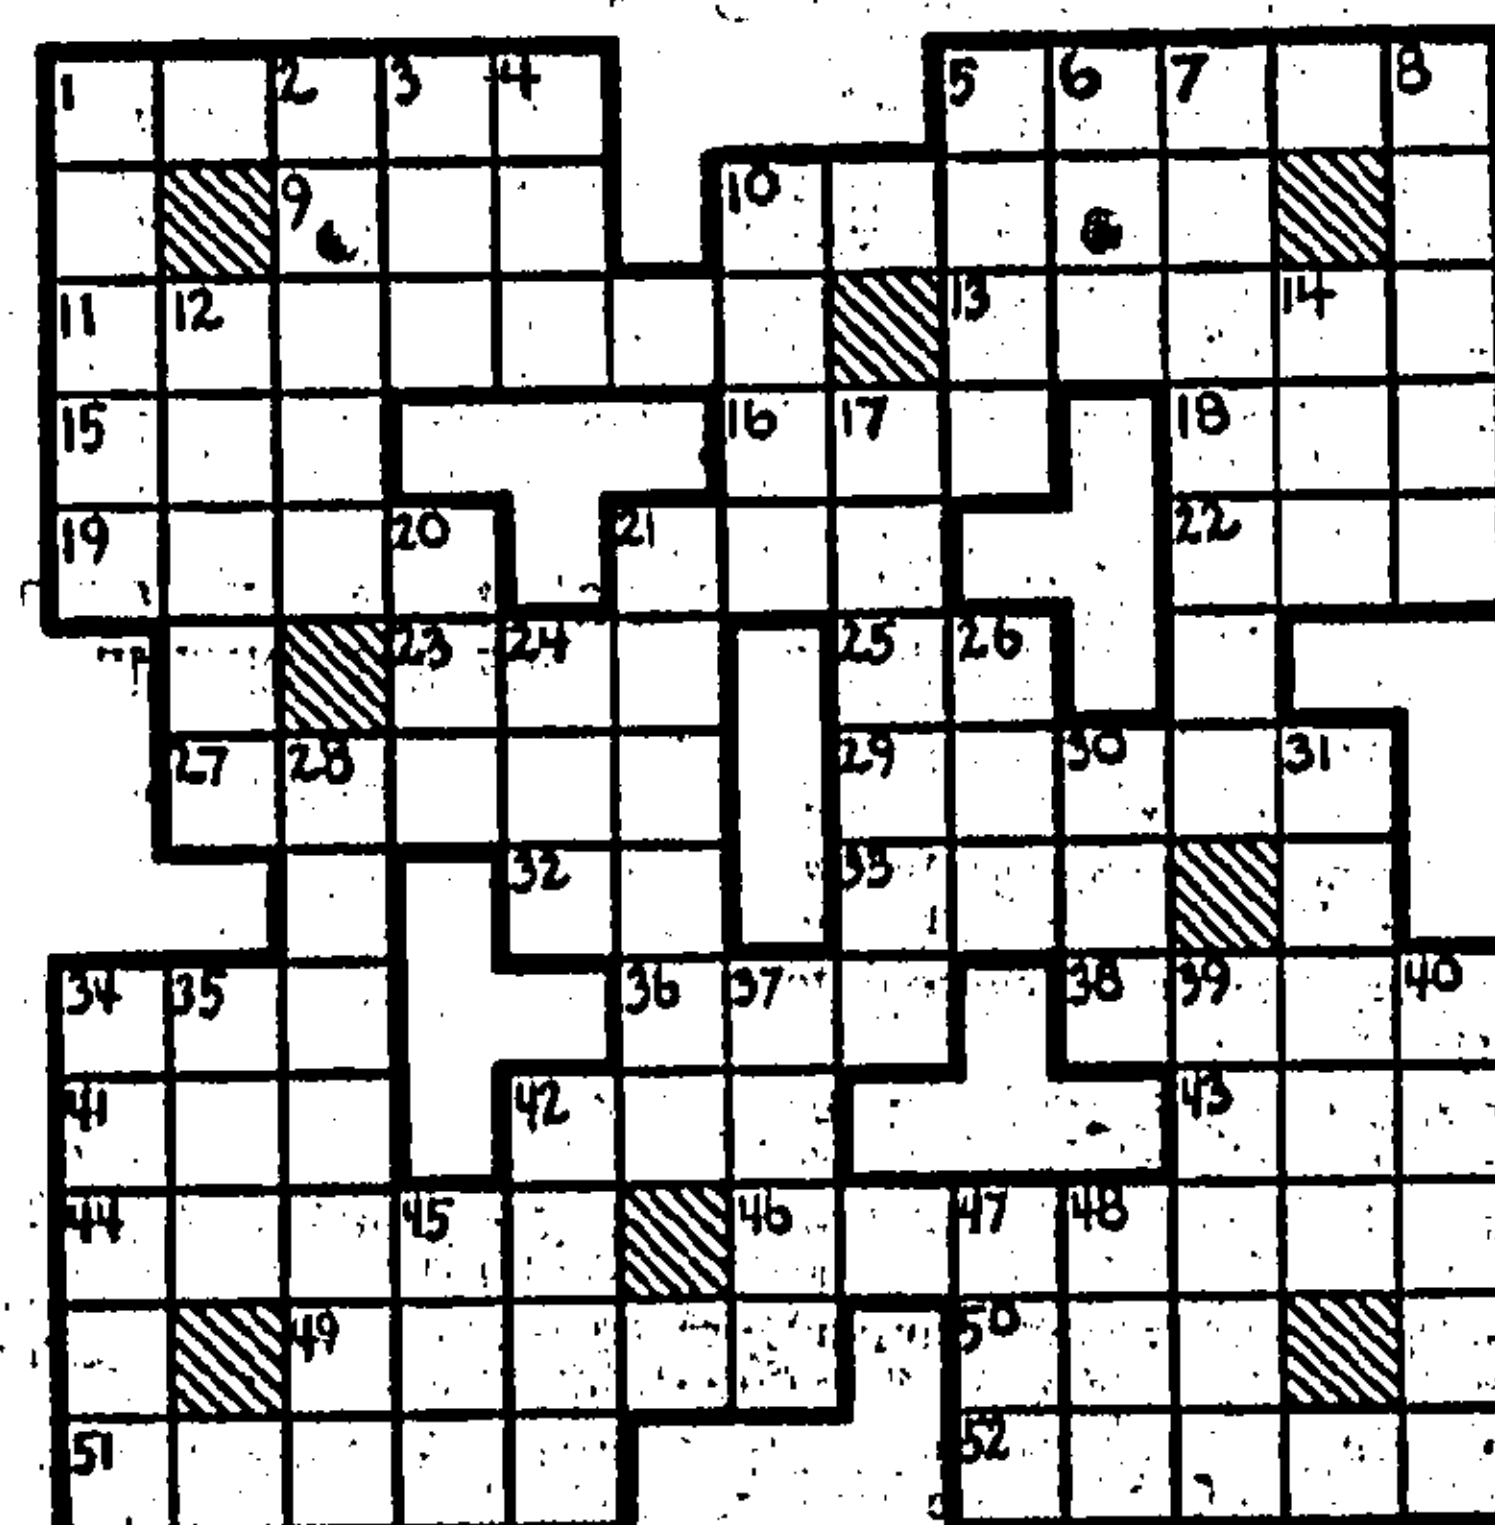

1½ cups juice from tinned raspberries; ½ cup lemon juice; ½ cup quart; seltzer water. Mix the fruit juices, sugar, and a little grated sugar; 8 thin slices cucumber; 1 lemon rind. Add cucumber, rind left on, and let stand in the refrigerator for several hours. Strain, mashing the cucumber a little, and add seltzer water. Serve with cracked ice. Makes 1½ quarts.

BRIDGE NOTES
Reaching The Correct Contract.
(By ELY CULBERTSON)

Reaching the correct contract in Contract Bridge is, generally speaking, a matter of giving and receiving information. Players who love to pre-empt on hands in which the proper opening is an approach bid and who love to force on hands where simple takeouts are in order find that with tremendous frequency they reach unworkable contracts and play the hand in the wrong suit or play it in a suit when it should be played in notrump.

So well understood to-day are the correct principles of bidding that there is really very little excuse for partners going far wrong in the process of exchanging information and only in cases where they encounter very unfavourable distribution should large penalties follow any tested partnership bidding.

An interesting example of a splendid exchange of partnership inferences occurred in a recent Duplicate game on the hand below:

West Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

Diamonds—6 4 2
Clubs—J 8 4

West

East

3 D (3) Pass 3 S (4) Pass
4 NT (5) Pass 5 D (6) Pass
6 NT (7) Pass Pass Pass
1—West's hands is almost strong enough for an Opening Forcing bid of two but the distribution suggests strongly the wisdom of making an Approach bid in preference.

2—East has two alternatives, either a bid of three spades or the one actually chosen—namely, two notrump. Considering the fairly balanced nature of his hand the two notrump response, which, while not forcing, is very strong, appears the better.

3—There is no occasion for West to force in this position. East's first response to his Opening call assures him that when he shows added strength by bidding a new suit a game contract at least will be reached.
4—East also knows that there will be further bidding, and while he could now bid four spades he purposely underbids in order to gain further information.

5—West's hand certainly justifies this bid, which shows two Aces and the King of a bid suit.
6—West knows now that there is a fit in spades and that a contract of five in one suit or the other would be reasonably safe.
7—East now shows that he can also support the diamonds bid by his partner.

8—West knows that East must hold either the King or Ace of clubs to have justification for the two-no-trump call. The bid of six notrump rather than six in a suit is perfectly correct based on the distribution and on the further fact that the hand was played in a Duplicate game scored on the match-point basis.

ROUND HONG KONG'S CINEMA THEATRES
MAIL REVIEW
"THE WHITE SISTER—QUEEN'S THEATRE"
Heralded as one of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's most ambitious productions of the year, "The White Sister" starring Clarke Gable and Helen Hayes, is now showing at the Queen's Theatre.
Miss Hayes who plays the part of Angela Chiamonte, daughter of an Italian Prince, will be remembered for her outstanding portrayal in "A Farewell To Arms." Clarke Gable has the role of Giovanni Severi, a lieutenant in the Italian Army, while Lewis Stone fills the important role of Angela's father.
The silent version of the film with Ronald Goldman and Lillian Gish, it will be remembered, was of a period before the World War, but the talkie has been modernised to that of the Great War, with aerial bombardments and disasters of the conflict over the Italian Alps, taking the place of the eruption in the silent version.
The acting throughout the film is brilliant and one should make a point of seeing this modernised version, of one of the greatest romances the screen has ever offered.

MAIL REVIEW
"THE BLARNEY STONE"—CENTRAL THEATRE.
Tom Walls, famous star of the Aldwych Theatre farces, is now showing at the Central Theatre.
Seen as a fascinating Irishman with a "gift of the gab," which talks him out of numerous awkward situations, Walls gives an excellent performance, in this, his first solo effort.
In the opening of the film he is seen, being threatened by Sinn Feiners, who calmly burn his house about his ears, his "blarney" however, saves his skin but leaves him sleeping on the Thames embankment. Later he obtains a job in the City and talks himself into becoming a wealthy financier, but fails to succeed in saving himself from going to prison.
Tom Walls directed this British and Dominion production and made an excellent job of it, the comedy blending with the drama in a pleasing manner. Anna Grey is his leading lady, while Robert Douglas plays an important role.

MAIL REVIEW
"GRAND HOTEL"—ORIENTAL THEATRE.
Greta Garbo, in the part of the Russian dancer Grusinskaya, dominates the rest of the brilliant cast in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's latest success "Grand Hotel," the screen version of Vicki Baum's novel, the current attraction at the Oriental Theatre.
"Grand Hotel" is a masterpiece of screen melodrama, lavishly produced, skilfully directed and magnificently acted, and is a film everyone should see.
Wallace Berry and Lionel Barrymore are excellent in support, while John Barrymore in a youthful role also gives an accomplished performance.

MAIL REVIEW
"TO-NIGHT IS OURS"—MAJESTIC THEATRE.
"To-night Is Ours," now showing at the Majestic Theatre, offers exceptional entertainment, and is one of the best films to be seen locally for some time.
Fine emotional acting on the part of Claudette Colbert and Fredric March is a feature of the production and the remainder of the cast, including Allison Skipworth, give splendid support.

MAIL REVIEW
"CAVALCADE"—KING'S THEATRE.
In "Cavalcade," the Fox super-production now showing at the King's Theatre, Hollywood is declared by a home critic to have made Britain's greatest film.
Not only has it made our first truly national film, but also found our first real woman star Diana Wynyard, a recruit from the London stage, making her screen debut, achieves a triumph by her exquisite acting as the gracious Jane Marryot.

MAIL REVIEW
"CAVALCADE"—KING'S THEATRE.
This twenty-six-year old Swedish-born girl gives a superb performance, yet she was turned down by British film companies as being unsuitable for film work!
"Cavalcade" is undoubtedly the finest screen achievement since talkies were introduced, and it was made in America by Frank Lloyd, who was educated at an I.C.C. school at Shepherd's Bush.
The story opens in England at the time of the Boer War in 1899, and shows the march of events up to the conclusion of the Great War.
The acting is magnificent throughout.
Clive Brook gives a finely restrained and natural performance as the husband, and Herbert Mundin raises a low comedy role to the level of first-class character acting.
"Cavalcade" embodies the soul of England as no other film has yet done, a truly amazing feat considering that it was made so far away. There is not a false note in this inspired parade, and Hollywood must be thanked for making the grandest and most moving picture of our time.

This twenty-six-year old Swedish-born girl gives a superb performance, yet she was turned down by British film companies as being unsuitable for film work!
"Cavalcade" is undoubtedly the finest screen achievement since talkies were introduced, and it was made in America by Frank Lloyd, who was educated at an I.C.C. school at Shepherd's Bush.
The story opens in England at the time of the Boer War in 1899, and shows the march of events up to the conclusion of the Great War.
The acting is magnificent throughout.
Clive Brook gives a finely restrained and natural performance as the husband, and Herbert Mundin raises a low comedy role to the level of first-class character acting.
"Cavalcade" embodies the soul of England as no other film has yet done, a truly amazing feat considering that it was made so far away. There is not a false note in this inspired parade, and Hollywood must be thanked for making the grandest and most moving picture of our time.

LESSON SERMON
First Church of Christ, Scientist—Hong Kong.
"Reality" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which was read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, September 24th.
The Golden Text was: "Behold, I create new heavens and a new earth: and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind" (Isaiah 65:17).
Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Rejoice in the Lord, O ye righteous: for praise is comely for the upright.... For the word of the Lord is right; and all his works are done in truth.... By the word of the Lord were the heavens made; and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth.... The counsel of the Lord standeth for ever, the thoughts of his heart to all generations" (Ps. 138:1,4,6,11).
The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "To grasp the reality and order of being in its Science, you must begin by reckoning God as the divine Principle of all that really is.... There is but one primal cause. Therefore there can be no effect from any other cause and there can be no reality in aught which does not proceed from this great and only cause" (pp.275,207).

LITERARY NOTES

LONDON SECRETS

Guide With Original Idea.

London Scene. By H. J. Massingham.
(Cobden-Sanderson, 10s. 6d.).

This is always a stimulating, though occasionally an "aspirating," book.

Most authors have too few original ideas. Mr. H. J. Massingham has, if anything, too many, some so perverse and wayward that he would seem to have resolved to challenge every accepted view about London.

He scarcely so much as regiments his clever sayings; he demolishes a grand army of epigrams in a single chapter. A whole benefit night supply of fireworks will be let off in a single page. The reader is delighted but dazzled; after a while he cannot help blinking.

So many ingenious books have been written on London lately that Mr. Massingham almost despair of saying anything new. "It is the essence of London," he says, "if it has one, to baffle dogma, to elude the club or the car of a generalisation, and to make hay of an impression by its contrary." Nevertheless, undeterred alike by the immensity and the minutiae of his theme, he issues forth to catch the spirit of the London months from May to April—it is characteristic of him that he will not start on Jan. 1—and from the analysis of a "tableful of Thames water" he divines the secrets of London's soul.

Every Phrase Of Life.

In the quest he starts a multitudinous company of ideas and gets them dancing the oddest, maddest measures, while every now and then there comes a flashing thought which illuminates his text like an infiltration of flood-lighting.

To quote a few obiter dicta from pages which deal with every phase of London life: women, statues, shops, pictures, houses, books, and a million other things as well.

The British Museum resembles a cold bath in this, that a plunge is invigorating, but long immersion brings a mortal chill.

She (a mannequin) was of a good clipper-build, but of no sculptural line.

James II. (his statue near the Admiralty) might be a diffident, book-minded public servant on the retired list, brow-beaten by his daughters to go to a fancy dress ball.

The parsley (at Covent Garden) is as fresh as the beginning of things.

In Regent's Park you feel nothing out of the common can ever happen. Only the yell of an infant falling on the asphalt disturbs its regulated repose.

Let those Londoners who from long familiarity have ceased to see and feel the quiddity of London take Mr. Massingham for their guide if they would be recalled to their "senses." As I have said he will stimulate and exasperate in turns. His big defect—and he confesses it—is that he does not venerate antiquity for itself. No one can be a perfect lover of London who does not worship her immortal age as well as adore her perennial youth.

Men Of Good Faith.

One Thing I Know. By A. J. Russell. (Hodder and Stoughton, 5s.).

The author who gave us that remarkable book, "For Sinners Only," has not been deceived about the size and sincerity of his audience, for the British edition has gone through fourteen editions, and is selling briskly still. Here he takes a larger ambit than the Oxford Group, for he raids all the men of divinity who have struck him as having something real and human to reveal concerning the inwardness of sin and repentance, and the phenomena of spiritual conversion.

No form of open-air meeting testimony is too hysterical for him; no page of William James too coldly scientific. He weaves into his text life-stories from Gypsy Smith, first-hand sensations from busy journalists, sagacious and characteristically counsel from the Bishop of London, and talk of extreme frankness from Father Woodcock, in which the well-known Jesuit preacher counters anti-Roman theories and answers challenge with challenge in the true Queensberry style.

There is a tonic past about the book, and it does one good to pierce, of "War and Peace," which find so much practical, strenuous faith in evidence to-day.

HOWARD SPRING'S
Guide To The New Books

Rubber. By Madelon H. Lulofs for there is bound to be a good deal of loose swaying among unrooted things in those conditions. Altogether, this is an unusually able book, well worth translating.

Film—World As Plot.

Such Power is Dangerous. By Dennis Wheatley (Hutchinson, 7s. 6d.). Mr. Wheatley, with his first novel "The Forbidden Territory," showed himself to have a clear understanding of what a sensational novelist should write and how he should write it.

Here he is no less improbable, no less able in devising incidents to rush the reader over the chasms which yawn in probability. The story concerns a plot to concentrate the world's film industry in a few hands. All the best-known people in Hollywood appear under thinly disguised names; and we English must take what consolation we can from the knowledge that the arch-villain is an English peer.

Lord Fortescue is the traditional master crook of a thousand novels; the brain of a superman and the morals of an ape. He it is who lets loose murder in two continents in pursuit of his ambitions which, needless to say, are frustrated by simple worth in league with a fair lady.

If you care for this sort of thing, you are not likely to get it better done than it is done here.

Hereditry.

Translate No Further. By Dorothy Russell (Graysons, 7s. 6d.). Katherine was the daughter of a Swedish professor who had written a book on hereditry. Living in an English cottage, she was translating it when the question became more than academic.

The man she loved was given to ungovernable rages, and she discovered what he himself did not know: that both his father and a remote ancestor had killed people in blind passion. Married, her problem was: should she give children to her husband—children in whom the dark streak might recur?

Mrs. Russell writes well and her characters are presented as credible human beings. They are perhaps slightly clouded by a feeling that they exist to work out a theory.

There is no harm in that if the novelist, having let them go to the end of their tether, could leave the reader himself to say, involuntarily, that so, inevitably, these things must have been. It is a different thing if you are conscious all along of the novelist guiding the creatures on to slippery slopes of demonstration. And I had something of that feeling all through the book.

Land And Sea Thrills.

Sunk Without Trace. By Sydney M. Parkman (Hodder and Stoughton, 7s. 6d.). Villains on land and sea; with a Bourbon conspiracy in the remote background.

A scheme to wreck the Bank of France by suddenly flooding the country with false notes, some impatient villains who could not wait for the grand moment but began using the notes for their private convenience, an English innocent mixed up in the conspiracy: it all makes a breathless rushing farrago that can be recommended if pace is the thing most desired.

Maniacal Murders.

Murder on Shadow Island. By Garnet Weston (Hutchinson, 7s. 6d.). Shadow Island was on the St. Lawrence river, and it was an unhealthy spot to live in.

Four people disappeared in pretty quick time; and what was so unnerving was that the murders tended to be accompanied by shouts of maniacal laughter and the rapid flight of a leaping figure towards the woods—a figure with "something bestial and apish in the way arms and legs whirled it towards the dark wall."

Good properties of melodrama seem to "come natural" to Mr. Weston. He piles them up effortlessly and makes a "castle" of mad, mad, mad—a castle which he presently tumbles with the touch of a cold explanation.

Succession to an inheritance is the root of the villainy; that old "impediment" is an old enough line for a novelist to peddle, but here they are put so brightly to use as to seem almost new.

TIMELY BOOK ON TOLSTOY.

Written By His Daughter.

Readers of Tolstoy have an interest in his daughter Countess Alexandra Tolstoy's book, "The Tragedy of Tolstoy." This is one of Allen and Unwin's books. It is timely, too, because there is a new issue in the "World's Classics" of "War and Peace," which lives long after most novels have died.

TOILERS OF THE NORTH SEA

Two Books That Smack
Of Ocean Thrills.

Sail and Oar: A North Sea Sketch-book. By Ernest Dade. (Dent, 7s. 6d.).

Cruising and Ocean Racing. By John Irving, E. G. Martin, and others. (Seeley, Service, 21s.).

"This is the fisherman's life of the North Sea on the Dogger Bank . . . and the Silver Pits which are some miles farther south." Thus in large simplicity does Frank Wheeler, a plain fisherman of Filey, introduce Mr. Dade's fascinating book of a hundred drawings of the fishing vessels of the Yorkshire coast in the days before the internal-combustion engine put a stop to weary tramps round capstans and to long pulling by hand of heavily-laden boats.

These drawings are indeed the record of things passed away. As Mr. Peter Anson has aptly said, the Yorkshire fishing cobbles and smack of the past century were among the finest examples of English seagoing craft ever devised. None were better fitted for the rugged coast which was their home or for the rough seas which they encountered. Every man who has sailed in them, and who has known and loved the fisher-life of Filey and Flamborough, as Mr. Dade has done, will be thankful for this intimate and memory-stirring tribute to them.

New Cruising Volume.

Without his passion for the sea and for sail the true Briton would be something less than the man he is. Interest in cruising and ocean racing is probably at a higher level to-day than for some years past, in spite of the motor's intrusion into the yachtsman's sphere.

The cruising volume now added to the excellent Lonsdale Library will be welcomed by all men of sail. It was overdue. Its chapters, contributed by well-known experts, contain all that the practical yachtsman needs to know about design, rig, management, and navigation, and cover every type of craft from the most elegant to the most humble.

Besides a number of invaluable diagrams and a splendid collection of photographs, "Cruising and Ocean Racing" contains the authoritative flag etiquette, and the chapter devoted to it "has been reviewed by the Admiralty, who have accepted it as correct."

Changed Outlook In India.

Lord Willingdon's address to the joint session of both Houses of the Legislative Assembly recently touched upon all outstanding features of the existing situation in India. The aspect of deepest interest to British opinion is, as always of recent years, the question of the maintenance of law and order. The time has been, and not so long ago, when no one speaking of that subject with knowledge and responsibility could have given a promising account. Lord Willingdon now can say—and it is largely due to the merits of his own administration—that the country is to-day more peaceful and more free from disaffection than it has been for many years. Terrorism, though still a menace, is "well in hand." It is a special and separate police problem, local to Bengal, and without roots in general popular sentiment. But as for Mr. Gandhi's movement of civil disobedience Lord Willingdon sums up what is the universal verdict of those entitled to speak of the matter when he declares that "the popular judgment has really discarded it." It has been a very serious danger. Now it has become, as the Secretary of State expressed it in the House of Commons recently, a matter of altogether secondary importance. Those who practised civil disobedience have fully learned the lesson that no terms would ever be made with anyone rejecting the ordinary obligations of law-abiding citizens. At the same time, the evidence of the sincerity of British intention in the matter of constitutional progress for India has at length overcome the forces of concentrated ill-will and badly-propagated mistrust. The Viceroy's own repeated declarations of keen sympathy with Indian desires, and of belief in their ultimate fulfilment, have had specially telling effect. That will be increased by the appeal he made to his audience of Indian legislators, whom he asked to do their part in creating the right atmosphere for the working of political reform and preparing the electorate for its new responsibilities. One very material point in this connection was mentioned in the course of the speech. After referring to the soundness of the financial position, and the excellence of Indian credit, Lord Willingdon held out strong hopes of the setting up of a Reserve Bank soon becoming practicable—a measure which is one of the financial conditions precedent laid down in London for the establishment of Indian self-government. He made, too, emphatic reference to a matter of a very different order—the use of aerial bombing in last month's minor operations on the North-West Frontier. The case for this use of aircraft "in certain outlying regions" has been completely established in Geneva and elsewhere. Although the Disarmament Conference would never be allowed by the British Government to break down on this sole issue, the situation as it stands is such as put out of the question the abandonment of a weapon of authority for which there is so much to be said on all accounts.

Diet As A Mental Stimulus.

If the suggestions of the Board of Control with respect to improvements in the dietary of patients in British public mental hospitals are carried into effect there will be just cause for envy among those who have not had the good fortune—at least at meal-times—of being certified as mentally unstable. The idea is that patients will benefit by less monotony and regularity in the diet. So a three-weeks' dietary is suggested instead of a weekly one, the argument being that patients will brighten visibly at the sound of a dinner-bell if they do not know what fare will be set before them. They remember a weekly rotation of meals and it depresses them; a three-weekly rotation will leave them guessing. Occasional surprise dishes are also recommended. For example, a chand-froid might start a stimulating conversation as to whether it was more hot than cold or vice-versa. But why should mental patients not be expected to eat steamed cod with anything but reluctance? The cod is an excellent, succulent, and sustaining food, and if it is tasteless the fault is the cook's not the cod's. It seems that the Board overestimates the devastating effects of the "fish and chips" regime. As to the question of dietary in its broader aspects, how many millions of people outside the mental hospitals would be thankful enough to be sure of regular meals, however unpalatable, without being asked to do so? It is a very real responsibility. One very material point in this connection was mentioned in the course of

HERE, THERE AND EVERYWHERE

Eighty-three, Not Out
Few men to-day set a finer example of clear thinking, hard riding, and plain living than President Masaryk of Czechoslovakia, who at the age of 83 has vigorously reiterated his views on frontier revision. In a Europe torn by hate and discord, no man enjoys more universal respect.

The President still does his "physical jerks" every morning, after rising at six, and can still touch his toes without bending the knee.

On one occasion, in his room in the Bracany, a year or two ago, The Maharajah of Patiala, who was present, called attention to the beauty of the carpet. The President at once bent down and examined its texture carefully for several minutes. Many men half his age would have gone purple in the face.

Back To Gallipoli
The Royal Naval Division Association is promoting a visit to Gallipoli, to be made next May. Three years have passed since members of the Association revisited Anzac, a place that must have stirred lively memories; when they go back to Gallipoli profounder chords will be touched.

The veterans of one of the war's most memorable campaigns, with their friends, will make the journey in the Montrose, and their disembarkation from her will be more pleasant than was the dash from the old Clyde nearly 20 years ago.

But it will be to the same famous beaches; and the visitors will find that time's ravages have not yet erased the trench lines on Suvla, Helles and Anzac. The Turkish welcome will not be so immediate as it was; it will be postponed till our men get to Constantinople.

A patient rang the bell of a doctor. The doctor's wife opened the door. "Can I see the doctor?" asked the patient.

"Couldn't you come to-morrow night?" asked the wife.

"Is he that busy?" inquired the patient.

"No," said the wife, with a winning smile; "but you are his first patient and I'd like to surprise him to-morrow, as it's his birthday."

MR. WELLS FORECASTS NEW CIVILISATION

(By Harold Nicolson.)

Glory. By Francis Stuart. (Gollancz: 7s. 6d.)

H. G. Wells's new book, "The Shape of Things to Come," is published by Messrs. Hutchinson for the price of 10s. 6d. It is written in the form of a dream-history and describes the decline and fall of capitalist civilisation, the ensuing period of frustration and collapse, the return of prosperity under the Air Directorate of 2010 A.D., and the final evolution of the Modern State in 2059 A.D. By placing himself at a point 150 years removed from the present moment, H. G. Wells is able to prophesy, poke fun, and readjust proportions with infinite gusto and complete dignity.

He tells us how the Soviet experiment deteriorated owing to excessive dogmatism, how the skyscraper was succeeded by the carapace roof-line, how the United States Treasury even by 1939 were unable to pay their Navy, of Kovov's Permanent Death Gas, of the great pestilence of 1955, of the deserted ruins of New York and Monte Carlo, of the landslide which destroyed Central London, of the introduction of Ogden's basic English and of Homer Lee Pabst's kinetogens, and of the slow emergence of a planned civilisation over a depopulated and famished world.

He readjusts the proportions of the European War. Karl Marx, the London Economic Conference, our present police system, and Fascism. He indulges in incidental but extremely spirited lances against bankers and armament firms; Hitler and Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, Bloomsbury and Bernard Shaw, James Joyce and Senator Borah. And he shows us history "as a string of accidents with an increasingly disastrous trend" leading our well-intentioned but inert civilisation towards the final catastrophe. And finally he promises us the emergence of "a comprehensive faith in the modernised World-State, Socialistic, cosmopolitan, and creative."

This happy consummation of a world in which sage men and women live noble lives for ninety years untroubled by greed, jealousy, or sex complications, is not achieved till 2059 A.D. In the interval we and our grandchildren are forced to suffer atrociously for the ineptitudes of those who refuse to believe in disciplined planning.

Attack on Inertia.
Everything that Wells writes is stimulating, suggestive, and intelligent. Yet, under the imaginative vivacity, the unflagging intellectual energy of this book, there is a serious and, indeed, impassioned purpose. Wells has always possessed "the mental conception of history." He has from his earliest days fought a majestic battle against slack thinking. His present book is something more than a sound diagnosis of events. It is something more than a satire on or criticism of our present worried optimism. One has the impression that in this volume Wells has gathered together all his knowledge, all his fierce indignation, all his passionate sympathy, and all his talent, in a concentrated effort to force upon his contemporaries the urgent need of active co-operation.

Essentially, the book is an attack upon the pitiful inertia, the wreckage of regionalism, the complacent stupidity, or present political apathy, which have brought us to this point.

Sherry. Even our wars, by 1940, are ineffective owing to our increasing incapacity for co-ordinating them. Even our catastrophes are unmanageable. Modern civilisation merely peters out, we are depopulated by a term. Yet the final impression left by this book is anything but depressing. For behind all Wells's bitter denunciations there is a steady flame of hope, a belief that the new world which he envisions is not only possible, but inevitable.

Richard Middleton was not, I think, a very important poet. He wrote memorable lines; "And men and women old without regret, Dreaming of love fulfilled, were lovely yet."

Yet as a link between the nineties and the nineteen hundreds he was not as significant as Dowson and not as gifted as Alfred Douglas. He died young and tragically. A certain aura hangs around his name. And Messrs. Rich and Cowan may well be justified in publishing a collection of his articles and stories under the title of "The Pantomime Man" (7. 6d.).

The book is interesting, if only in that it has elicited from Alfred Douglas a critical introduction. Yet in itself it is meagre stuff. Adolescent sentimentality mingles with a crudity of critical judgment which

JAPAN PLANS BIG MILITARY EXPENDITURE

Billion Yen Loan For Army And Navy.

STRAINED INTERNATIONAL SITUATION THE REASON

Tokyo. The newspaper Nichi Nichi asserted on September 13 that Gen. Sadao Araki was urging other members of Premier Saito's Cabinet to adopt a loan of domestic bonds for one billion yen (approximately U. S. $270,000,000) which the War Minister declared necessary to strengthen the Japanese army and navy "in view of the strained international situation."

Gen. Araki proposed that emergency taxes yielding 50,000,000 yen a year be levied to pay interest and amortisation charges of the loan, which would be handled apart from the regular budget.

To Build Navy. The proceeds of the huge loan would be used to finance the navy's programme to build to the limits permitted under the London Treaty of 1930 and complete the army's replenishment programme.

Recently Gen. Araki and Admiral Osumi, head of the navy, have been most active in urging their Cabinet colleagues, especially Finance Minister Takahashi, that the demands of the two military arms be given priority in framing the budget for the 1934-35 fiscal year, which begins next April 1.

The aged Finance Minister, according to Japanese language newspapers, is inclined to agree, though the current budget is not balanced and Takahashi has had to grapple with difficult problems of finance.

Largest In History. The naval estimates already submitted for the budget are the largest in history, including 180,000,000 yen for construction of new ships and 75,000,000 yen for modernization of capital ships.

For the next fiscal year, it was learned, the Navy Ministry wants 680,000,000 yen, which is 30 per cent. greater than the largest previous estimate, for the year 1921-22.

The combined army and navy demands for their budgets total 1,240,000,000 yen, which is 45 per cent above the allotments for the current year. Takahashi declared recently that the navy estimate would be given precedence because a portion of the construction programme had been postponed in recent years.

Up To Limit. The navy's plans include the construction in the next three years of two 8,500-ton six-inch gun cruisers, two 10,000-ton airplane carriers, 14, 1,400-ton destroyers, six submarines and a mine layer. This would be the limit under the London Treaty. Also projected is the creation of eight new air squadrons, making a total of 39.

Foreign naval authorities here have expressed the opinion the big navy move is due to the American building programme, Japan's diplomatic isolation since the Manchurian campaign, and the desire to enter the 1935 London Naval Conference with a fleet up to the limits of the 1930 Treaty so full parity with the United States and Great Britain may be demanded in place of the present 10-10-7 ratio.

12-YEAR-OLD BOY OFFENDER.

Faces Five Charges In Four Months.

Chau Kwan, a 12-year-old Chinese boy, this morning made his fifth appearance at the Central Magistracy in four months, when he pleaded guilty to larceny of two rolls of cloth from the Chung Wah Company, Queen's Road Central, and was sentenced to one week's hard labour.

Sub-Inspector Dredge said the accused was seen walking about the shop with his arms crossed over his chest as if he was hugging something to his chest.

An assistant approached the accused and forcing opened his arms, disclosed two rolls of cloth which fell to the ground.

EXPRESS AIR MAIL SERVICE TO THE CAPE

Paris To Capetown In Four Days.

NEGOTIATIONS IN PROGRESS

Cape Town. Negotiations for the establishment of an express air mail service down the West Coast of Africa from Europe to the Cape are now in progress with the Governments and Administrations of the West Coast countries according to Mr. Peter Falk, the South African representative of large overseas interests.

In an interview with Reuter's correspondent at Windhoek, Mr. Falk said that the northern portion of the route from London to the French Cameroons had been surveyed and that ships and aeroplanes would leave London shortly to complete the survey work from the Cameroons to the Cape. It is hoped that at least a portion of the service will be in operation before the end of the year.

According to the proposed schedule, this express mail service will use planes capable of a cruising speed of 175 miles per hour and the trip from London to Cape Town will, at the outset, occupy 4½ days. The tentative schedule gives Paris as the starting point, the mails to be brought over from London, Berlin, Brussels and the Hague overnight. There will be little night flying.—Reuter.

SCOUTS AND GUIDES CONCERT

Entertainment At St. Paul's College.

VARIED PROGRAMME

The Grand Concert given at the St. Paul's Girls' College on Saturday night in aid of the funds of the Boy Scouts and Girl Guides was a splendid success and fully realised the expectations of the organisers, the Rev. N. V. Halward and Miss Zimmern, Guide mistress of St. Paul's College.

The programme consisted of songs by the 2nd Hong Kong Company Girl Guides and the 10th Hong Kong Troop Boy Scouts, exhibitions of boxing and first-aid methods, a solo dance by Miss Stella Ho and a black-face item by the "Ten Little Nigger Girls", followed by a play, "That's You", written by one of the Scouts of the 10th Hong Kong Troop and produced by the Scouts without adult assistance; after which a performance of the Cheero Band and a vocal contribution by Mr. G. D'Aguiro brought the first half of the entertainment to a close.

The second half of the programme consisted of two more items by the Cheero Band, an exhibition of illuminated club swinging by Mr. E. F. Sell, another dance by Miss Ho and item by the Scouts and Guides, all of which were received with hearty applause. Rev. G. T. Waldegrave, the Scout Commissioner, expressed thanks to the organisers, the 10th Troop Boy Scouts and the St. Paul's College Guides, and also appealed to those interested in both movements to come forward and lend their services as officers. Both movements were very much in need of officers, and classes of training would be opened for Guide officers at the Sandhill's Hut as from to-day.

To-Day's Short Story.

THE SMUGGLER

Py Aino Kallas.

PARBU-JAAN, the smuggler, sat on a bench in the cell for prisoners awaiting trial, expecting each moment to be called before the judge. His square-shouldered sailor's beard rested every now and then on the thick shawl wrapped twice around his throat; at each slightest movement his stiff, oilskin coat crackled. Weary with waiting, he let his eyes wander over the wall of the cell, but soon desisted, finding that he knew the room as well as his own fisherman's hut on the shore of Kihelkonna; it was the third time that he sat within these walls. He glanced for a moment at his companions—two youths, playing cards at the other end of the room.

In reality they were pretending to be occupied by the game, the while they watched him with grinning faces, and open, boyish curiosity in their eyes. Parbu-Jaan weighed them up a moment with keen eyes, accustomed to look far over vast stretches of sea, and to which all objects seemed too close, a frown drawing his brows together as though he weighed the two lads and found them wanting in the balance.

Quickly, however, his face, expressive of cunning and determination, became wreathed in smiles and filled with good-humour. He rose and paced across the room a couple of times, saying as he passed the youths:

"Stealing wood from the manor forest, hey?"

Tolerant forgiveness of the crime and contempt for its insignificance were mingled in his tone. "Hit the nail right on the head," one of the youths said braggingly, and aping manliness.

Parbu-Jaan did not deign to look at them, but halted and stood tall beneath the barred window set high in the wall, his stalwart frame, over six feet, seeming to fill the room and cast a giant shadow over all in it. His height enabled him to reach the window and to rest his chin on the ledge of stone, and for a moment he stood there motionless; then, with a gesture of disappointment, he turned towards the room.

His gaze had fallen on a little, typical Kuresaare yard, one of the many which opened out between the stuccoed, steep-roofed houses skirting the ruined fort like the song birds, full of life and chirruping, cluster round the nest of an eagle-owl. He had looked down upon it all, vegetable patches, hens picking on a refuse-heap, a cock standing on one leg, a horse champing its bit. It had not escaped his notice that one hen mothered three ducklings among her chickens; he had seen at a glance the black and yellow down on their bodies and their waddling walk.

RUSSIAN TO BE EXPELLED.

Unlawful Entry Into The Colony.

M. S. Barsky, a Russian, who was this morning convicted of a charge of entering the colony without a passport and with intent to commit a crime, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment and a fine of $100.

How they must long for water, he had thought, rising on his toes as if to get a glimpse of something on the distant horizon, beyond the roofs, where the air quivered in the heat as behind a dim veil of glass.

A thirst for what he could not see, yearning and disappointed, the pupils of his eyes expanded, his whole body called for salt after weeks of flavourless bread and water. The air was suffocating, and what little streamed through the crack in the window-frame seemed insipid, full of whirling atoms of dust. The sea remained invisible—far away behind the entrenchments and sand dunes.

He saw it in his mind—not a smooth sand for summer visitors at Kuresaare, but the wide lonely sea-flats of the Kihelkonna shore. So clearly did it arise before him that he seemed to smell the rotting seaweed cast ashore by the sea, and to feel the crunching of little rosy sea-shells beneath his boots. He saw himself wading in the water which slowly deepened—in calm, translucent water, at the bottom of which he could see the seaweed covering the rocks wave slowly in the current, and a swarm of tiny fish darting away at his approach. The water rose slowly, penetrated the tops of his high boots, saturating his trousers, rising towards his waist. . . . And then he was on board his boat anchored at the edge of the shallows. Did he not hear where he stood the restless creak of the rigging, the ceaseless beat of the waves driven against the stern by a favouring wind? But the boat lay immovable, the anchor clutched the white sand with its curved flukes, the sails drooped along the masts and the ship's sides were mirrored in the water.

It must be gone—to-morrow—the day after—next week it must be in Memel. . . . His grim features became restless, his lips deep hidden in his beard no longer twitch with ready humour. His eyes glared like those of a beast of prey—behind his brain striving to find a plan. . . . He must be set free this time. . . . That is the haven towards which he must fight his way. He must be as sure, as certain of himself, as when he steered his smuggler's craft past hidden rocks and watchful coast-guards.

The blind alley in which he is vainly groping becomes unbearable, he turns again to the lads whom chance has given him for companions, and in their curious eyes he reads the thought that fills his own mind: they are wondering will he escape imprisonment this time or not?

"Brushwood thieves," he grinned contemptuously at them, drawing himself up sharply to his full height, so that his broad shoulders seemed to support his body like a spar on which all else was hung.

"Boys, ahoy!—what would you say was my size?" he said.

One of the youths, the one who had spoken earlier, smiled slyly, winking at the speaker.

"Too big to be held by these walls, anyhow." "Right," he thundered in pleasure.

"We were playing 'durak' for thy luck," the youth went on, growing bolder.

"I need no luck but my own," he answered, with head thrown back.

"They say the Judge is a new one—come, lately from the mainland," the other lad put in hurriedly, anxious for a say in the matter.

"Parbu-Jaan" looked at the last speaker's long face, at his forehead hidden by the thick hair, at the bony contours of his nose and jaw.

"Whom do you think?" he asked with an attempt at a grin, almost a new flicker of hope, almost a thought, already forgetting the boy's face.

"The Judge is a new one," repeated Parbu-Jaan, looking at the speaker's face, at his forehead hidden by the thick hair, at the bony contours of his nose and jaw.

CAMPBELL WINS
HARBOUR SWIMMISS YEUNG EASILY WINS
LADIES' EVENT

H.K.I.A.S.A. PRIZE DISTRIBUTION

Swimming well-judged races W. T. Campbell, of the Y.M.C.A., and Miss Yeung Sau-king, of South China, won the Men's and Ladies' Sections of the Hong Kong International Amateur Swimming Association's harbour race, held between the East end of the Kowloon Docks, Hung Hom and finishing at the Chinese Bathing Club yesterday.

Campbell returned the very excellent time of 28 minutes, 9-4/5 seconds for the course of just over a mile and a quarter, while Miss Yeung Sau-king clocked 31 minutes, 47-1/5 seconds.

Wong Lu-man of South China very nearly created a sensation when he overtook Kwok Chun-hang fifteen yards from the finish, but the South China champion, broke into the crawl and won by a touch.

Campbell, who is a Lance Corporal in the South Wales Borderers, beat his own record in the Army harbour swim this year, and was placed second to L. Roza-Perreira in the Open Colony event last year, held under the auspices of the V.R.C.

On June 23, Campbell won the invitation harbour swim of the Chinese Bathing Club held over a shorter course. Miss Yeung Sau-king recorded her first win in a harbour swim this year in the Ladies Section.

Miss Yeung has an unbeaten record in this event and is the most versatile lady swimmer the Colony has yet produced. A large gathering estimated at well over 500 people crowded the Chinese Bathing Club's pier.

18 Out Of 21 Finish

Out of the 21 entrants who took the plunge, 18 finished the course, Miss Ng Yue-hing, the last swimmer to arrive, being carried well past the Chinese Bathing Club by the strong out-going tide. She broke into the crawl after employing the breast stroke and finished the course twenty minutes after Campbell had finished. She was loudly applauded for her plucky effort.

Of the 20 entries for the Men's event, W. A. Schreuder, Wong Yat-hung, So Tin-mo and Kwok Ho-sum scratched. Only three competitors did not complete the course. These were Ng Tsun-man (Chung Sing), D. Sutherland (Y. M. C. A.) and Cheung Iu-tin (Chinese Civil Servants Club).

The Ladies took the plunge first and Miss Yeung Sau-king and her sister Miss Yeung Sau-chun, both of South China, swam together for the first quarter of a mile.

The men took the plunge exactly five minutes later, and Campbell (Y.M.C.A.), Mak Wai-ming (C. S. S. C.), Kwok Chun-hang and Wong Lu-man of South China, were the ones who set the pace. Mak being slightly in the lead.

After the first half mile, Miss Yeung Sau-king broke away from her sister and Miss Dora Lum, of Chung Sing, and established a lead of about forty yards.

Campbell's Early Lead

About a quarter of a mile behind, Campbell had drawn away from the rest of the field. He was swimming with a steady crawl stroke with a 10 yards lead over Kwok and Wong, both of whom were employing the breast stroke.

The current in places was responsible for the blowing up of the pace of several swimmers, this being most noticeable with Campbell, Kwok and Mak Wai-ming, the latter following an easterly course towards the seawall on the Shaukiwan Road.

Nearing home Campbell, who was swimming beautifully, had increased his lead to about 15 yards. He won by a convincing margin.

Kwok was swimming neck and neck with Wong Lu-man at this period, but when about 15 yards from the finish Kwok adopted the crawl stroke and took the lead to win by a touch.

Mak's Plucky Effort

Miss Yeung Sau-king was next home. She was given a great ovation.

Mak Wai-ming, whom I said may have been a strong challenger for third place, came in fourth and was given a tremendous ovation for his very plucky effort.

Mak and Miss Dora Lum, who finished third in the Ladies' section, were the smallest competitors and their small figures compared with some of the other competitors raised very little hopes of them finishing the gruelling course, but they both finished up strongly. The following were the first three in the two sections:

Men's Harbour Swim Championship:—
1. W. T. Campbell (Y.M.C.A.)
28 mins. 9-4/5 secs. (Record)
2. Kwok Chun-hang (S.C.A.A.)
28 mins. 41-3/5 secs.
3. Wong Lu-man (S.C.A.A.)
28 mins. 41-4/5 secs.

Ladies' Harbour Swim Championship:—
1. Miss Yeung Sau-king (S.C.A.A.)
31 mins. 47-1/5 secs. (Record)
2. Miss Yeung Sau-chun (S.C.A.A.)
33 mins. 38-4/5 secs.
3. Miss Dora Lum (Chung Sing B.S.)
33 mins. 55-4/5 secs.

The following was the list of unplaced men swimmers in the order they finished the course:
Mak Wai-ming (C.S.S.C.)
30 mins. 9 secs.
Wong Tsun-man (S.C.A.A.)
30 mins. 51-1/5 secs.
Yeung Wai-lim (C.B.C.)
30 mins. 53 secs.
E. Fullinger (Y.M.C.A.)
31 mins. 7 secs.
A. G. Donn (Y.M.C.A.)
31 mins. 10 secs.

Choi Fook-sing (C.S.S.C.), Tsang Ho-fook (C.B.C.), Poon Ping-man (Chung Sing), E. W. Ralton (Y.M.C.A.), Yu Fuk-cheung (Chung Sing), Miss Leung Wing-han of South China and Miss Ng Yue-hing of Chung Sing finished fourth and fifth respectively in the Ladies' section.

At the conclusion of the event, Mr. Y. K. Mok, Chairman of the H.K.I.A.S.A., congratulated the entrants on their successes and also the committee for the success of the event.

Mr. E. W. Ralton, Secretary of the Association, then introduced Mrs. Y. K. Mok, who distributed the prizes won at the H.K.I.A.S.A. Championships, the Harbour Swim and the Water-Polo Shield, which was presented by Mr. Mok.

MAIR'S ALL-ROUND GAME IMPRESSES

(By SHORT HEAD.)

THE last official practice, in which all six teams to meet the Shanghai Interport team participated, took place on the Police Recreation Club's green on Saturday.

The heavy rain that fell during the week made the green very sluggish, and all the players experienced much difficulty in getting their woods to curve as desired, but, as a repetition of the conditions may occur in an Interport match the practice should stand our teams in good stead.

R. F. Luz was surprisingly defeated by H. Nish—and the Kowloon four were not favoured with the best of luck. Luz was brilliant at times, but, on the whole, did not come up to his usual form.

Coates and Fincher were both good at No. 1, but Chalmers did not play so well as usual. H. Nish was in good form, his shots often causing anxiety to his opponents.

The other Interport rink to suffer defeat was that skipped by U. M. Omar, which, after holding the lead for fifteen consecutive heads, eventually lost by four shots—a four on the 18th and a five on the last ends turning the tables. W. Mair, first reserve to the Interport Rink, came in at No. 3 where he played a splendid all-round game for the losers.

He was one of the few for whom the green held no terrors. N. J. Bebbington, who replaced A. R. Clarke, also played a good game, and justified his inclusion. Both skips, Grimmit and Omar, played very well under the conditions, but were not really comfortable on the slow green.

The Second Division Rink went down heavily to the Interport No. 2 Rink, losing by 25 shots. Adam Holland's rink (J. V. Ramsey, A.

BARSON SCORES 82

A. J. Barson, the "Shanghai Woodfull," scored 82 for the Shanghai team to visit Hankow against the Police last week-end. He hit ten boundaries during his long stay at the wicket.

Sam Isaacs contributed 12 not out to the total of 179 for 7 and took 4 for 17 to dismiss the Police for 46.

Torrie Wilson had 3 for 22 for the Reds against the Shaforce, and Pat Madar took 3 for 47 in the same match. The former K. C. C. player followed this up with an innings of 40 not out. S. R. Kernani, former opening batsman for the I. R. C., also made 40.

J. F. N. Mayhew, a "find" this season, made 42 for the Wanderers against the Stragglers, and Geoffrey More, the Colony Rugby Interporter scored 42. Donald Leach, the Shanghai skipper, scored 38 for the Stragglers.

The Shanghai team are due here on November 10, a week after the Malaya team arrive.

FUNG AND IP NOT IN THE SIDE

BORDERER PLAYERS' FIRST GAME OF SEASON

(By Spot Kick.)

BEFORE a large crowd of Chinese at Caroline Hill yesterday South China defeated the Army by 5 goals to 1 in a practice match in preparation for their visit to the Nanking National Meeting where they will represent Hong Kong. The winners of the soccer tournament will represent China in the Far Eastern Olympiad in Manila next year.

Without Wong Wing, Fung King-cheong and Ip Pak-wa, the Chinese gave an excellent display and were masters throughout. Playing brilliant football with perfect understanding they asserted an early superiority over the Army team, and, being on the whole about three yards faster than the military side, the match dissolved itself into a tussle between the South China forwards and the Army defence.

The game was very one-sided chiefly due to the poor showing of the Army forwards. Ridley was unable to turn out, and Harding was brought in at inside-left with Allan at inside-right. The four players from the Borderers were playing in their first game of the season and as a consequence were not seen at their best.

Allan is not a forward and completely ignored his partner, Baldry, while Fortey in the centre was very weak, failing to keep his wingers piled with passes.

So obvious was the starving of Baldry that Li Kwok-chui, South China's left-half was able to act as a sixth forward or third back as the occasion demanded. Harding did not fit in with Hocquard on the left wing and missed the passes he usually gets from Ridley.

On innumerable occasions, either Pardos or Cork passed down the middle where the close play of Allan and Fortey gave Lau Mau and Li Ting-sang a simple task to cover Wong Kai-wah.

Podmore was the best of the halves, Pardos making many mistakes, and Cork being in difficulties against Yueng Shui-yick. All the goals came from Yueng's wing. Mullane and Morrison did not show their usual understanding, Mullane being much the steeper.

There were no weak spots in the South China team. Li Ting-sang played a glorious game at back, and Lueng Wing-chui never wasted an opportunity to give his forwards perfect passes.

Leung's play is improving in each game. Though very early in the season, on his present form, this player must be the first choice in any Colony representative side.

Of the Chinese forwards Yueng Shui-yick was outstanding, his speed and his understanding with Wong Mee-shun had Cork and Morrison beaten throughout. Pau Kauping, former goalkeeper and now Second Division leader, led the line well and Tam Kong-pak initiated many dangerous movements.

Early Penalty Goal

Before a good crowd South China kicked off against a strong sun. Wong and Tam were through in the early minutes, but Mullane made a splendid clearance. In tackling Yueng, Cork fouled just inside the penalty area and from the "spot-kick" WONG scored.

In the first Army attack Harding had a scoring shot luckily diverted by Lau Mau. Lueng Wing-chui cleared well to Tam who made a great run only to shoot across the goal. Pau was prominent with a neat touch, Combey saving well. At the other end Podmore had a good shot turned for a corner.

In midfield the Army held their own but they could make no impression on the South China defence.

YUENG added to the score when sent away by Wong. He tricked Morrison cleverly and gave Combey no chance. A few minutes later TAM scored a doubtful goal when he seemed yards offside.

Chinese Mainstay Superiority

Crossing over three goals in arrears Allan went close, but the Chinese soon asserted themselves and TAM scored a pretty goal, placing his shot well, although hampered by Morrison. The Chinese halves delighted in sending perfect passes between the backs; Wong, Pau, and Tam being very dangerous with their speed in their favour. Combey was kept very busy saving shots from all angles. He made one particularly good save from Yueng Shui-yick.

The Army launched a number of raids, but persisted on keeping the ball in the middle when both wingers were unmarked. Fortey wasted chance after chance, none of the three inside men being fast enough for the close passing type of play, and the efforts of the Army halves to change the tactics were wasted.

WONG just missed with a good effort, but had the satisfaction of scoring the fifth goal a few minutes later. Tam sent through a splendid pass and Wong, cleverly evading Mullane, settled with a fast cross shot.

One Chance Missed

The score might have been increased a minute later when Wong was through with the Army goal, but he was fouled by Mullane, who was sent off for his foul play.

S. CHINA JUNIORS GO NAP.

Radio Defence Riddled At Caroline Hill.

At Caroline Hill, the South China second string defeated the Radio by five clear goals yesterday.

After a goalless first half the Chinese proved vastly superior to their opponents and scored through Kam Sik-wai (3) and Lai Sui-wing (2). Sousa, in goal for the Radio made some excellent saves, but the backs, Rocha and Aycock were weak, for South China, Yueng Poon-hing was outstanding.

South China—Tang Yat-ming; Chung Fai-lan, Ma Ping-cheung; George Yueng, Hui In-kong, Lam Tai-poi; Chan Kwong-kong, Ng Ho-tai, Kam Sik-wai, Lai Sui-wing and Yueng Poon-hing. Radio—Sousa; Rocha, Aycock; Ho, Elms, Tavares; Hanib, Kitchell, Haroon, Castilho and Costa.

FINE RIDING BY MR. HEARD IN CLASSIC

Deserved Triumph On Golden Dragon.

NATIONAL DAYS ECLIPSE

(By RAPIER)

Mr. Woo Lai Tin, prominent Chinese owner, was the only successful backer in the first "double" in the history of Colony racing and as a result he was the richer by $3,322 on Saturday.

Mr. Heard's win on Golden Dragon in the classic was most unexpected after the pony's mediocre displays in his track work, but "Johnnie" fully deserved his success. It was a case of good riding winning the race.

Warrington very nearly brought it off, in spite of what I said about him on Saturday, and all that I can say now is that Mr. Deits rode a beautifully judged race. I have always fancied De Minima, who has never been unplaced in six starts, but I hardly expected Mr. Pan to push his mount past National Day over 1 1/4 miles.

Dr. S. N. Chan's pony failed disappointingly. He was in the lead at the Distance Post and was second into the straight. About 150 yards from the finish Mr. Benny Proulx seemed to pull his pony in, and I was not surprised to hear that he had lodged a protest against Mr. Heard on Golden Dragon for crossing. The protest was, however, not upheld.

The cracker-jack pace set by The Panther, however, proved the undoing of National Day. Mr. Proulx kept up with Mr. Frost's mount until he faded out of the race at the Rock, and as a consequence the favourite was well spent by the time the straight was reached.

In my selections on Saturday I had three winners, an outside winner, and thirteen placed ponies in a day of upsets.

I understand that somebody who bought a ticket from Mr. K. Fujisima, the well-known Japanese photographer, was the winner of the first prize of $49,866.60, while C. P. Locke and Company secured the second prize of $14,247.60 as the result of securing their ticket from Dr. V. N. Atienza.

Mr. Jackie Noronha enjoyed a memorable exit from the Novice Class when he won on Flying Tourist to pay $238.20. By beating Mr. Frost on Wakefield, he was responsible for Mr. Woo Lai Tin, owner of Flying Tourist, being the only person on the "double."

The following were Saturday's results:

1.—2.00 P.M.—Big Wave Bay Handicap.—One Mile.
Li & Li's Mayflower 168 lb. (Mr. S. N. Pan) 1

A. M. J. Soares's Street Slinger 157 lb. (Mr. F. M. L. Soares) 2

Surreton's Solar Star 161 lb. (Mr. N. Deits) 3

Time: 2.08.3.

Pari-mutuel, winner $11.60; places, 1st $5.70; 2nd $9.20; 3rd $7.30.

2.—2.30 P.M.—Junk Bay Handicap.—Six Furlongs.

Promising Kowloon Soccer Talent

ELLIOTT, the Kent League player who has joined the Kowloon Football Club, had his first trial in local soccer on Saturday against St. Joseph's, when he made a very impressive debut.

Fast on his feet and a great opportunist, Elliott showed himself to be a great leader of the forwards.

Quick to snap up a pass he surprised the spectators with his snap shooting; two of these attempts found the net.

A player to make a re-appearance in local soccer was O. Davis who retired from active play two years ago. He performed extraordinarily well on the right wing on Saturday when time and again he proved himself too fast for E. Lawrence, the St. Joseph's left half.

HILL, playing at inside-left for Kowloon, was very dangerous when in possession, and his ball control gave the St. Joseph's backs no end of anxiety when he dribbled through time and again only to fall with inaccurate shooting.

KOWLOON who were content to play steady football in the first half, opened the scoring through Hill who broke away on the left and dribbled through to beat Marques with a rising drive.

In the second half it was a matter of shooting practice for Kowloon for the majority of the half.

S. BLISS, Kowloon's skipper, played a sound game, and was responsible for a glorious goal with a first time drop kick which, from forty yards out, left Marques standing. Bliss is still at fault with his head work. Although a great spoiler with his head, his sense of direction is very poor and very often he sends the ball to the wrong man.

GOULTY, a newcomer, had his second tryout, and made an impressive showing with first time clearances. He often proved himself a dangerous spoiler on account of his speed.

COMES at left back for the Saints was the steadiest of the two backs, Fernandez being inclined to adopt kick-and-rush methods. V. Costa in the key position was steady until he was kicked on the shins. He is definitely a good man.

THE Gosano brothers were notable absentees. B. Gosano is a strong candidate in the V.R.C. swimming championships, being the favourite for the Breast Stroke event, and preferred to finish his swimming activities before playing soccer.

Although A. V. Gosano, the better known of the two brothers, has recovered from the injury he sustained during the Manila tour last February, he will not be played in the forward line until later on in the season. "A. V." will probably be seen the Saints' defence in the opening matches.

ROCHA who made his first appearance for St. Joseph's on Saturday, having played for the Recrelo last season, is still the steady player, and dead shot which earned him a local international cap last season.

David Leonard, was the best man on the field for St. Joseph's. Together with Ward, who is making a reappearance after a long illness, he was constantly troubling the Kowloon defence, but his snap shooting was in vain against Vidro, Kowloon's new goalkeeper.

During the second half when the ball was being sent in from every angle, leaving Marques and his two defenders exhausted, Leonard dropped back to relieve the position, and broke clean through the Kowloon defence to put in a great drive which was well turned for a fruitless corner.

KOWLOON played well in the second half when their combination left nothing to be desired, but they will have yet to improve to overcome such teams as the Lincolns, whom they play next Saturday, and South China.

ON Saturday the Lincolns made three changes in the team which did duty last week against the Club when they lost 4-6.

Harding came in at inside right for Higgins, who has an injured ankle; Roden, of the second eleven, displaced Colclough at right back and Cpl. McGuinness took the centre forward position vacated by Malpas who left for England on Saturday by the Naldara.

WITH the team they decided on Saturday against the Club and which won by 7 to 1, the Lincolns should go far in the League this year. They are now the leading military team, as both the Borderers and the Artillery have been considerably weakened by the absence of several first-class men.

known . . . The walls of every tavern in Saaremaa had heard it. The very forests had echoed it. He was surprised himself now at his own daring, admiration for himself grew within him as for a stranger . . . Then also he had sat awaiting trial, his feet itching to be off, his vessel eager for departure. It was then that he shut his lips to a narrow line, took on an expression grave as of one in a church and asked to be allowed to speak to the judge: "Merciful Judge-Lord, the wife is welcoming a little stranger—she ought to be brewed, and then the baptism couldn't I go for a couple of weeks?" The judge hesitated—an old rascal, that Parbu-Jaan—but in the end consented.

"See that you are back here in two weeks' time." He had raced to the Kihelkono shore, hoisted sail, flown off to Memel for a load of rum and gunpowder. On the day agreed he had knocked at the prison door.

His thoughts returned to those old days, as if to gather strength from them. And in spite of his present plight laughter shook his frame, laughter that would free his spirit and restore his pride.

Memories tossed him up and down like a vessel tossed by the waves, tormenting and provoking him to laughter. This much he knew, that never would he be able to store too many such memories. He felt his craving for new adventures to string on to the old could never be slaked. He knew that never would he be himself again until he felt the deck planks away again beneath his feet, with his hand upon the tiller.

An autumn evening . . . the land showing as a dark streak, looming up strange and unfriendly even for him, as he steers towards it. The moon unnaturally large, a rift torn in the sky, gleaming dimly instead of casting light. He can hardly trust his eyes, the spray clouds his sight as with a curtain of mist: as a rope creak or taps against the mast he starts. He feels that the darkness that cloaks the shore is hiding something hostile, a danger which his senses do not grasp, but only some occult instinct. Suddenly signal lights flare up on the shore . . . the coastguards! With his comrades he begins to throw barrels overboard, grimly watching them as they roll into the water and sink—everything overboard. Next his eyes take in the shore, marking trees, rocks and sandflats in the dim darkness, drawing the place, its distance from the shore, more clearly in his memory than ever did surveyor on paper. The following day they lift the barrels from the bed of the sea with hooks.

Blood mingles in his memories, the sky glows an ominous red, he sees a hand clutch the gunwale of his boat, a large brown hand with knuckles and nails of iron—a hand whose owner is nothing to him—a hand rising from the depths to prevent his journey. His anger concentrates on the hand that dares to delay his boat, to him the hand is a living entity separated from all body. His hatchet swings through the air and the hand falls into the sea.

From this whirlpool his thoughts turn rapidly. Instead he sees, a bright summer day, a smooth sea with flying gulls gleaming silver in the sunshine. He stands leaning against the mast of his boat, cunning, reserved, following with his eyes the Customs officials who search his vessel, running around like rats, nosing everywhere from hold to cabin, from cabin to deck. Without moving a finger he watches them, casting biting remarks at them between puffs at his pipe, advising them of secret hiding-places unknown to them. One after the other, they crawl on deck, discomfited as though suddenly drenched with water, and he bids a polite good-bye to their chief, offering him a drink from his flask, bidding him welcome another time. But as the Customs boat grates on the sand, he seizes the coil of rope on which one of the searchers had sat, and between his hands rubs its end, which crumbles into brown leaves with a familiar smell—a twisted rope of tobacco.

Again he cast a yearning glance through the window. It is the middle of August, at night the sky gleams with stars, each one a compass. It is his pride to sail to Memel or the Swedish coast without a compass, trusting only to those tiny guides, which through the night vanish, light up, and shift as the yawl sails on.

"Wasn't thou who said there is a new judge?" he asked suddenly, turning to the boys.

"It was I," one of the boys replied, proud of his knowledge.

Parbu-Jaan smiled, his hand stroking meanwhile his beard. In his fancy he heard the sound of words, and much talk, his own voice rising and gaining confidence, some one laughing outright. . . . His hand clenched in a tight grip. . . . Now he has gotten the idea. . . . Just that. . . . As yet he is not quite certain, the scheme is almost too dare-devil, but he must close his eyes to the danger. His state of mind is that of a diver in deep water; perhaps he may sink for ever, more likely he will rise again to the surface.

He looked at the boys and began, already to play his new part—his keen, knowing eyes dilated and became vacant and stupid, his shoulders drooped, his hair fell over his forehead, hiding its strong, intelligent lines, the firm decision of his mouth is lost in loose, gaping lips.

"Well, whom do I look like now?" he asked, turning to the two youths and pushing his cap to the back of his head.

They stared at him startled, something of wild savagery had suddenly come over him, something terrifying and inexplicable; they looked questioningly at each other, perplexed and open-mouthed.

"Like Mad-Mats," whispered one into the other's ear.

"Right, boys. I am not quite right in my head, remember that. All night I have talked gibberish. I can no longer tell the moon from the sun. . . . If anyone asks, says that."

The shifty eyes of the elder youth flashed and expanded, gleaming with understanding and admiration. The other stared, uncomprehending.

The elder youth bent suddenly towards Parbu-Jaan.

"What wilt thou give us?" he whispered.

Parbu-Jaan eyed him sternly, and broke into a laugh. He felt as proud of the boy as though he himself had trained him. The lad's early-developed business sense appealed to his own instincts.

"A gun and powder, of the best make." He threw the words hastily at him as the warder's steps sounded in the corridor.

The boy threw himself with his whole weight against the door, and beat on it with his fists.

The startled eyes of the warder appeared in the spy-hole, eyes used to darkness, which appeared perpetually to dread any disturbance of the everyday round.

"What has happened here?" he said in a chiding tone.

Parbu-Jaan stood in a corner, muttering to himself. The youths had drawn as far as possible away from him.

"We want to be put in another cell," cried the elder youth. "We can't stand him—he isn't right here, all night he has been listening to him talk, talk as fast as his tongue would let him."

The warder looked suspiciously at Parbu-Jaan.

"What has happened to him here?" he murmured.

Parbu-Jaan's own part he would have been ready to let them guess, but he would not let them guess that he was a smuggler.

What has addled his wits now?"

he repeated to himself.

"Let's go to the judge," he said quietly and coaxingly as to a naughty child, laying his hand gently on Parbu-Jaan's shoulder and pushing him out of the room.

Parbu-Jaan obeyed without resisting, not for a moment forgetting his part, his lips moving all the while in babble of meaningless words.

In the court-room the judge, a bespectacled gentleman, waited with his clerk.

"This man has gone mad during the night," the warder humbly explained, as though the misfortune was partly his fault.

The judge cast a cold eye on Parbu-Jaan, and despite its coldness, Parbu-Jaan felt himself go hot.

"That remains to be seen," the judge said dryly.

He read the charge in a loud voice.

Parbu-Jaan listening with his eyes wandering uneasily round the room.

"Two empty coffee sacks stamped with the Memel seal were found in the attic of Parbu's house," the judge finished his charge.

"Well, look now—don't lies get found out, gracious Judge-Lord," said Parbu-Jaan. "Sacks! As though coffee was ever carried in a sack—why, it would drip out."

"What nonsense art thou talking?" said the judge.

"No one carries coffee in a sack—coffee's a drink."

"Dost thou not know coffee, man?"

"How should I know gentle-folks' dainties?"

The judge looked at him for a while and then said:

"Come here—is not this thy compass?"

Parbu-Jaan peeled towards the table, purposely dragging his feet. With head on one side, he began to examine the compass.

"Well now, isn't that queer? It's moving—well, by . . . it's dancing like anything: what's the matter with it?"

"I can remember with whom thou speakest. Who art thou?"

"Thou art one of God's errand boys. When God draws up the laws of the tables of stone, thou bringest them down to us."

"Now, where wert thou last night?"

The Smuggler

"I sat in the threshing-barn as God had created me, the wife washing my only shirt."
"Confesseth thou or not?"
"Of course I confess whatever the Judge-Lord wishes. To everything I say only yea and amen."
"Thou wert then in Memel?"
"Certainly."
"When did that occur?"
"It is hardly twenty years ago."
"Have a care what you say, man."
"That is what I'm doing, and a care for my back too. I am not altogether mad, though not so clever as your Honour."
"Pah! I have no time for lunatics."
Parbu-Jaan's head drooped lower, and a smile vanished in his bushy beard. He dragged himself after the warden out of the court, the warden staring at him with respect mingled with fear. In the prison yard he paused—looked up at a window to where two youthful heads gazed curiously down at him, and waved his hand with a toss of his skipper's beard. His nostrils dilated as though the scent of the sea had struck them.
Six hours later he was bound for Memel, in the bright sunshine of an August night—with thousands of tiny, twinkling stars for a compass.

IDEAL WORLD IN 125 YEARS

allows him to confuse Barrie with Stevenson, Frank Harris with Chesterton and Bello. One derives the impression that Middleton had a most uncritical sense. His passion for bubbles was almost Swinburnian. His sensibility, though unhappy, was trite. As an admirer of his verses I cannot but regret this publication.

Mr. L. A. G. Strong is a difficult problem for any reviewer to tackle. He is so competent, so respectable, so well-intentioned, so gifted. His latest novel, "Sea Wall" (Gollancz, 7s. 6d.) is just as good as it can be. From start to finish it is perfectly correct. The fault that I find with Mr. Strong's novels is that I can find no fault with them. They remind me of those expensive houses erected by Mr. Adler for the millionaires of Chicago. They are perfect in conception, in execution, in material, in furnishing, in plumbing, in taste, and in certain fabrics. There is not a fault to find. Nothing could be better.

And yet anything, anything than that is surely better?
I admire Mr. Strong. I think he is an excellent writer. I should like to admire him wholeheartedly. I am convinced of the integrity of his intelligence. Yet how I wish that Mr. Strong, if only for a book or two, would go to the bad.
"Sea Wall" contains all the "right" ingredients. You have childhood psychology (treated with whimsical characters (treated with deft understanding); you have the open-air business (bathing, boxing, swimming, fishing, and the Great European War); you have sensibility (the eyeglasses of strong men dimmed by nobly suppressed emotion); you have Irish humour, fog-scenery, heather, and a touch of mysticism. All this is superbly done. Yet one wishes that a man of Mr. Strong's ability could get away from literature for a moment and get down to life. Mr. Strong's novels bear but a faint relation to the real perplexities of modern existence. As an antidote against such perplexities they are unequalled. Does one absolutely admire anodynes?

Of a different quality is "Glory," by Francis Stuart (Gollancz, 7s. 6d.). This is a very remarkable novel by one of the most important authors of our time. Mr. Stuart, in his hatred of a modernisation, has produced a satire on the machine. As a satire, it is exciting and excellent. Even as H. count

Giants Checked By Braves

Senators Badly Beaten In U.S. Baseball.

DOUBLES FOR BROOKLYN AND DETROIT

New York, To-day.

New York Giants, National Baseball League champions, were forced to share the spoils with Boston Braves in their double-header yesterday, and Washington Senators, American League champions, were decisively beaten by Philadelphia Athletics.

Brooklyn Dodgers secured the double over the Phillies and Detroit Tigers, who are now without Stanley Bucky Harris as manager, recorded two wins over St. Louis Browns.

Results as cabled by Reuter were:

U.S. To Increase Co-operation With League.

Geneva.

It is reliably learned that the United States may increase the degree of its co-operation with League of Nations.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt may establish a permanent United States representative to the League at Geneva, and also create a League division in the state department, it was said.

The United States in the past has co-operated with the League in many ways, participating in various conferences called under the League auspices, such as disarmament, the world economic conference, opium control, labour, etc.

In the League sessions on the Manchurian crisis, followed by Japan's withdrawal from the League, the United States was represented by an "unofficial" observer.
